Spa Pure Clover Skin Spa

BY BREANNA MOORE
Published: February 01, 2010

Featuring a friendly, knowledgeable staff and a host of treatment options, Pure Clover Skin Spa occupies a small space nestled right off PCH in a quaint neighborhood of Dana Point.

I would be receiving Pure Clover's signature AcuFacial – a relaxing combination of acupuncture and more traditional facial techniques.

Since I was nervous about the acupuncture, Richard, my therapist, described the sensations that the procedure provides and made sure I was comfortable about the attributes and side effects of the technique .

I shouldn't have been worried.

Richard was focused on my comfort as he placed needles into 12 spots, targeting specifically my face to bring more energy to the area. I felt only a slight prick when the needles were inserted and balanced, and I was impressed with the way the sensation quickly evaporated.

PURE CLOVER SKIN SPA, CONTINUED ...

Once the acupuncture was complete, Clover, the owner of Pure Clover Skin Spa, provided me with the traditional components of the treatment. It included a full-service facial, which provided a cleansing, a mask and an extraction process. Clover was happy to share a wealth of skincare knowledge.

I was then treated to "sugaring," a hair-removal process similar to waxing. Sugaring is not as painful as waxing, since it does not take off any skin – only hair. The treatment left my underarms feeling smooth; more to the point, days later my underarms were still stubble-free.

As I exited Pure Clover, I couldn't help but notice that the skin on my face and under my arms was noticeably softer than when I'd walked in. Feeling refreshed and tranquil as I left, I knew that any small moments of concern were worth the treatments' rejuvenating effects.
